Dear Parents, Carers and Students

It is with a sense of deep sadness that I write to you on the day our Queen passed away after 70 years and 127 days as the monarch. The majority of people will only know the Queen as our Head of State. As the longest reigning monarch in British history and the second longest reigning monarch in world history, the Queen gave a life of service to the country.

I am sure that we can all learn from the Queen's immense strength of character and her support for others. As patron to more than 600 charities and organisations across the UK and the Commonwealth, she continued her active work until her health made this impossible.

Everyone who has met the Queen comments on her ability to make them feel relaxed in her presence. She had an ability to break boundaries and she helped the United Kingdom, and the Commonwealth, form friendships across the world. There may be a period of national mourning and we will ensure staff and students have the opportunity to reflect on the Queen's unrivalled contribution to our society.
